The new model should weight at least 100 kg lighter than the previous model, depending on the design. By Len Aftab. Environment and climate change Climate change The NSW Government considers climate change to be one of the greatest environmental challenges facing the State. The NSW Government has committed to reduce net emissions of greenhouse gases by 33-35 per cent below 2005 levels by 2020 and by 40-45 per cent below 2005 levels by 2050. Australia has ratified the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) and has agreed to take part in the resulting Kyoto Protocol.

According to the UNFCCC these emissions reductions will need to be achieved in the domestic sector, as well as in the national, bilateral and international context. Biodiversity It is a common notion that biodiversity is being degraded rapidly by the activities of mankind. A UN report in 1992 published by the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (IUCN) determined that it is "widely agreed" that "species extinctions are occurring at an unprecedented rate". The assumption is that the rate of extinctions will increase. The State Government is aware of the threats posed by habitat loss and degrading ecosystems, including species loss, and is taking preventive steps to ensure the maintenance of biodiversity.

Conserving and managing our State's waterways Conserving and managing the State's water resources is a critical component of conserving biodiversity and improving water quality. Biodiversity has been proven to enhance water quality and effectiveness in the following ways: Five years of experiences with an open system for cell culture of low-passage (2-3) fresh tumors. The aim of this study was to evaluate a cell culture system including an explant filter unit for slow permeation of dissolvent medium. We investigated the influence of continuous perfusion of the tumor explants in vitro as an alternative to the routine method of cultivation. The main advantage of this alternative to classical methods of cell culture in vitro was the enrichment of the tumor tissue with viable cells and the maintenance of viability. By perfusion of the explants only the lower half of a suspension medium was replaced at regular intervals. The viability and the number of viable cells of the tumor fragments were determined and compared with each other with a static culturing method.Q:
