Testers that are used to assess the quality level of a product, and not to determine its authenticity. They can be with different functions: measuring blood pressure, blood sugar, pulse. But this is not the most important thing that they have. The tester must be properly placed on the object or part of it in order to determine what it is measuring. The tester must be mounted on the part of the body where it will measure and in the place where the result is to be measured.
