The present invention also relates to a laser light source having a high-intensity laser beam and a low-intensity laser beam. An optical measurement system using light as a means for inspecting defects of a sample surface, for example, can detect a defect such as a scratch with a high sensitivity by utilizing the mechanism of speckle. Such a defect inspection can be carried out by illuminating the surface of the sample with coherent light, imaging the scattered light, and detecting and analyzing an interference pattern that is generated from the scattered light. For this method, a method of measuring the intensity of light emitted from a sample while scanning the surface of the sample is used (see Non-Patent Document 1: "Surface roughness measurement using speckle shearing interferometry", Optics and Photonics News, Vol. 14, No. 11, pp. 37-38 (2003), Non-Patent Document 2: "Optical measurement of surface microstructure using speckle
