This means that the exams in Music, English and Gymnaestria start this Friday (7 January 2018). Please check the websites of your REITs and Universities to see if there are any differences in the start date. As always, please make every effort to attend your own exams. REMINDERS For advice on how best to prepare for exams and to review what you have learnt during your semester, you are very welcome to come and see me in person (or join me via Skype). I will be in the UK between 10 January and 4 February 2018, coming down on 8 February. During the latter part of the year we have two meetings for all students: On Monday 10 January (prior to final examinations) On Friday 14 February (after final exams) These meetings are in Room G40 of the Old Court Building and will start at 4.15pm. We will be taking the opportunity to look at best preparing for exams from a global perspective and discussing how universities could take advantage of an international approach. I will also be teaching a short course on 'Using your academic records', and a half-day specialised 'Helpful advice on your REIT's'. Final exams will be held in the Old Court Building on Monday 17 February. Prepare for your exams You should also ensure that you have taken part in the REIT Tripos Indexing course (RXI). This is a highly effective way of generating course information that will be very useful for your revision, as well as enabling you to check how similar and how different the content of the same course is across the various REITs. If you haven't done this already, you need to

Overall: See also: Structural DNA analysis of rRNA genes has become an important tool for understanding the molecular biology of eukaryotic cells. We are working to elucidate the developmental biology of the ciliate protozoa by studying the genetics of rRNA synthesis and processing. Cell fractionation techniques have been developed and are being used to isolate DNA in the nucleus, the cytoplasm and the membrane-free ribonucleoprotein particles. The structure of rDNA has been studied by reassociation kinetics, nucleotide composition, restriction enzyme mapping and limited nucleotide sequence analysis. The fractionated DNA has been reannealed to determine the precise structural and functional domains of the molecule. Conformation sensitive gel electrophoresis (CSG) has been used to study the structural relationships between the 5S and 45S rDNA species in the eukaryote, Paramecium. We have previously shown that transcription of the 5S rRNA gene is stopped 50-55 nucleotides upstream from its 5' terminus in the 45S precursor. The more recent discovery of the 5S-like sequence in the 45S rRNA of Paramecium has been confirmed by RNA analysis and for the first time we have obtained direct evidence for transcription of the 45S rDNA precursor in vivo. Recombinant clones containing appropriate restriction fragments of the 45S rRNA gene were transformed into Paramecium and transformants were analysed by CSG, RNA dot and ligation blot hybridization. Proteins purified by immunoadsorption or cellulose (F-cellulose) chromatography were used to raise antibodies to study the species and concentration of rRNA processing enzymes in mitotic and meiotic cells. We have begun a large program of purifying rRNA processing enzymes to understand their mechanism and specificity. The total tRNA and rRNA synthesis programs of 6a5afdab4c
