www.wizards.com/Products/Adobe/Paralels/Tools/Photoshop/index.asp ## _3D Illustrator_ 3D Illustrator is a relatively recent and powerful tool that enables designers to create a three-dimensional look for their projects. Unlike Photoshop, Illustrator has a different approach when it comes to layering elements. Illustrator is a vector image-editing program, so it renders layers that can be edited in any manner and can be easily erased and resized. Illustrator offers some powerful features that enable users to create 3D models from their 2D artwork. It's also used for creation of 3D text and contains a variety of advanced text and type features. The example pictured is created in Illustrator from an illustration I made in Photoshop. Like Photoshop, Illustrator is a vector-based program, so there's no quality loss when layers are merged. * www.adobe.com/products/illustrator * www.tutorialspoint.com/illustrator/ * ##

Fireworks Fireworks is Adobe's creation suite, a package that contains editing tools for multimedia designers. It's a vector-based program so it renders layers that can be easily moved, resized, and edited in any manner. Unlike some of the other programs described in this list, Fireworks doesn't render images as rasters like other programs, such as Photoshop. Rather, it relies on path technology to deliver more vector-like images. This can be a benefit to print designers, in that they have more control over the way the images will print. It's also a drawback in that the printing process requires more computer resources. Fireworks is used for a variety of different projects, especially when designers want to make a look or layout that is a hybrid of two or more media. An example of this can be seen in the collage that follows, which was created in Fireworks. * www.adobe.com/products/fireworks ## _PowerPoint_ Childhood-Onset Chromophobe Renal Cell Carcinoma on Both Renal Allografts: A Case Report. On the basis of the discovery of multiple pheochromocytomas in a 27-year-old woman we performed nephrectomy on both renal allografts. Histological examination of the allograft revealed a chromophobe renal cell carcinoma. The parathyroid gland and other intra- and extrarenal organs were normal. A review of the literature revealed no other reports of chromophobe renal cell carcinoma within renal allografts.

President Trump Donald John Trump Federal prosecutor speaks out, says Barr 'has brought shame' on Justice Dept. Former Pence aide: White House staffers discussed Trump refusing to leave office Progressive group buys domain name of Trump's No. 1 Supreme Court pick MORE tweeted late Tuesday that "tremendous progress" was being made in the government shutdown negotiations, and predicted the government would be back "fully open" in about three weeks. Tweet The president added later Tuesday that he "never" wanted the shutdown to happen, but it was necessary to get his wall funding. "It is merely a delay in order to have what is already being built, but it is being built," he said. ADVERTISEMENT Trump began tweeting about the shutdown just after midnight Tuesday, hours after the longest shutdown in U.S. history had broken the 24-hour mark. He was reacting to a statement by Senate Minority Leader Charles Schumer Chuck Schumer Democrats scramble on COVID-19 relief amid division, Trump surprise Pelosi, Schumer 'encouraged' by Trump call for bigger coronavirus relief package Schumer, Sanders call for Senate panel to address election security MORE (D-N.Y.) on the Senate floor that the negotiations between the White House and Democratic leaders had reached a "stalemate." "There are real problems with the President's position," Schumer said. "I would say the President is not ready to approve even $1.6 billion, and we have no intention of budging." Trump had held out for more than $5 billion for border wall funding in his negotiations with Democratic leaders and Congressional leaders, as well as White House officials and staff. He has said the $1.3 billion in border security funds allocated by Congress last year was not enough and that he's prepared to declare a national emergency in order to get funding for the wall. ADVERTISEMENT The White House has said the president was willing to accept a short-term extension for funding for the Homeland Security Department to keep the government open. But Democratic leaders have rejected that offer. The partial government shutdown, now in its 26th day, is the longest ever in U.S. history. Democrats have said they will not fund Trump's border wall, while White House officials have said they will not approve a measure that does not have the president's border wall funding. Trump and Democrats have offered competing plans to reopen the government. Trump's plan would
