Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a multi-piece solid golf ball with excellent flight performance, which is prepared by producing a multilayer golf ball in which an innermost core layer is formed of a soft inner core layer and an outermost core layer is formed of a hard outer core layer with good rebound characteristics at high temperature and high humidity and by forming an intermediate layer between the soft inner core layer and the hard outer core layer, thereby obtaining both excellent distance and controllability and playing feel. 2. Related Art In the golf balls having hitherto been used, a three-layer structure was adopted by making an outermost layer of one layer by crosslinking and hardening a polybutadiene resin with cis-1,4-bonds, and the golf ball having an excellent flight performance and durability was obtained. However, in the conventional art, the rebound characteristics (rebound coefficient) at high temperature and high humidity were low, resulting in unsatisfactory flight performance. Moreover, it was difficult to achieve both soft feel at impact and hard feel. In light of the situation, the inventor of this application has studied the ball properties, and for the purpose of
