What's new in Room Box:

of the Nerd Clowns SRX: The Game of the Nerd Clowns is a fan-made collectible dice game from the Boys In The Basement YouTube channel. In the game, players are competing to roll the hardest dice or come up with the best strategy to win. The game features an original board with custom-painted tokens, a set of six pre-generated player decks for a more normalized play, single-player or two-player online play, a fully documented ruleset, and a handy print-and-play that allows players to conduct public plays. The game was created by Erik White, a game designer for the software company RealNetworks. White is also known for his previous project, EXMA, a collectible dice game that debuted in 2004. He first came up with the original idea for SRX after developing the EXMA board and the concept for a collectible dice game completely through the private ruleset of the EXMA gameboard. White then came up with an improved version of that concept after his roommate presented it to him. SRX quickly caught on as a strong novelty over the next several years, with the Boys in the Basement producing many videos featuring notable character players, and expanding their media network in order to produce more content. SRX quickly grew as a point of reference and interest even for avid game players. White now has a show on YouTube in which he moderates a live 2-player game of the game, and also plays all the characters through the ruleset in his own YouTube series that has over 19,000 subscribers. Statistics The game is produced by Not In This Deck, a company that bills itself as "Official Publishing for Creative Process". The artwork and music are by Justin Hunterson. An IOS version of the game was made, allowing for multitouch play. All the original artwork is by Lord Magumee. SRX is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-Share Alike 3.0 United States License. There is a copyleft provision as required by ReTard in every release and revision, and a release number is indicated on every document accompanying the rules (or official images for versions without official rules). Development Growing popularity As the game spread throughout the internet, dev specialists began to question what technique and technology could help them improve the game for the next version. The development happened slowly and casually: Jason Smathers, who was asked by Not In This Deck to develop the website

SUPER HIJINKS! Hot topic: do you remember water guns? If you were in the mid-90s, you might have. Heck, if you were 8, you probably remember the lame-as-hell arcade game that used giant plastic guns. Either way, SENRAN KAGURA: BADLANDS is a modernized, CGI-heavy, and action-packed take on that gameplay. There are only three things you need to know about. 1. Water. This is what SENRAN KAGURA: BADLANDS' characters manipulate to do their thing. There are more than a dozen water-based special attacks to see in battle, from hijinks like water-filled ice pillars to tantric fountains and fire hoses. Each of those attacks can be used in combination with other weapon-type-specific attacks, letting you adapt your playing style as you see fit. Players can even craft their own water combinations with the included RPG-like attribute card crafting mechanic. 2. Ninjas. That's right, BADLANDS' ninjas can hijink, too! There are more than a dozen ninjutsu-based special attacks to see in battle, from water-filled punching attacks to water-based tar-based bombs. In addition, you can unleash a ninja's strongest attacks by using her special Shuriken, a spinning wind-style attack that allows characters to attack multiple times in succession. 3. Hijinks. There are certainly more than enough ways to hijink in this game. You can use water as a weapon with the various assault and gun-type attacks in each battle. You can also strategically use your unique hydro-jetpack abilities to hop around the battlefield, follow the action, attack those who attack you, and safely reach out to pelt foes with your favorite water-type weapon. Don't forget to use your special attacks, too. You can use water to perform tantric fountains, or douse opponents in fiery torrents! Then throw in the standard fire, ice, earthquake, and lightning attacks for good measure. You can do all this with a variety of weapons, which you can create with your custom attribute cards. Don't forget to include your favorite bomb attacks, too, which can be switched out at any time. Yikes, if that list of hijinks sounds like a lot, just wait until you see what else you can do!
