`$('div').bind('mousewheel',function(e) { var scale = 1.1; e.preventDefault();
$(this).stop(true, true).animate({ scrollLeft:scale * ($(this).scrollLeft() -
$(this).innerWidth()/2), scrollTop:scale * ($(this).scrollTop() -
$(this).innerHeight()/2)}, 400); });` And it works great, however in IE it only works while scrolling and not when resizing. I think it's because of the following: `$('div').bind('mousewheel',function(e) { var scale = 1.1; e.preventDefault();
$(this).stop(true, true).animate({ scrollLeft:scale * ($(this).scrollLeft() -
$(this).innerWidth()/2), scrollTop:scale * ($(this).scrollTop() -
$(this).innerHeight()/2)}, 400); });` When using mousewheel during resize, it doesn't correctly calculate the left and top values of scrolling, instead it only uses width and height. So my question is if you know of any javascript that allows me to get the left and top value during resize, it will probably work for IE. A: i don't know if it work but.`scrollLeft()` and.`scrollTop()` return the position on the viewport, not on the content (only
