Hornblower is your typical naval officer. He is an objective thinker, a pragmatist with focus on the obvious. Seppings, on the other hand, is an artist of moods. She is a romantic who finds satisfaction in toying with the most ephemeral of ideas and objects. They are thus a good match, but Hornblower knows how to survive alone, and Seppings knows how to survive within the confines of convention, and so they come to accept the responsibilities of marriage. (Actually, Hornblower and Seppings are not married, which probably makes them some sort of work-related benefit to Scandal (which I can get behind). As a romantic, the fact that he and she don't have the title of "wife" on their wedding certificate, does that mean they're not related romantically at all?) Blackadder – Episode 1 (Hornblower and Seppings, a.k.a. S. (Cecily) Birtwhistle and V. (Julia) Anstruther-Wetherby, have a very close relationship with each other, one which is sometimes complicated by the fact that they are not related romantically, as well as the fact that they both work for the Admiralty) Blackadder – Episode 2 (They enjoy one another's company. Hornblower still thinks of her as a friend, just as she thinks of him as someone she can confide in.) Blackadder – Episode 3 (While Hornblower
