The serial cross-communications bus is: Python IDLE not showing newlines I'm running Python 2.7.4, and in Spyder 2.3.8. When I run IDLE I don't get a newline after typing. It used to work fine before, and I haven't changed anything. I found an issue that was similar, but not the same issue. A: Are you talking about tab characters at the start of lines? If so, it should be either a new tab or a new window. If it's the latter, just click on it so the Python shell opens in a new window. Otherwise, it's probably a new tab and you have default settings that is missing a newline. Go to Edit -> Preferences -> Appearance and check "Show new line characters" and "Show whitespace characters". A: This is a good idea, but I use the following shortcut. It is not perfect, but it might be the equivalent of hitting "Ctrl-S", "Ctrl-Q", "Enter". Try "Exit". I'm actually the author of this question and the method I am using is the same as the accepted answer. A: Python does not have a newline by default. Use "Enter" instead to add a new line.
