Enter the fray in a massive turn-based strategy game full of combat across multiple frontlines including and beyond war-torn Virginia, the East Coast, the West Coast and the Mexican Border. Play as the two main factions from the original game - the North and the South. And like the original, be sure to choose side wisely before you're drawn into war with countless friends and enemies. "While the core of the experience remained the same, and it still remains a gorgeous looking and sound strat-RPG to this day, Game-Labs was definitely ahead of the curve in terms of how immersive such a game could be in the modern era." What's new:

"Anomaly Zone" is the second single from American rapper Nas' 2002 album The Marshall Mathers LP. The song features fellow rapper Kanye West. "Anomaly Zone" has since been used in one video game (Pit Fighter) and one movie (2008). The song was produced by Kanye West and Dr. Dre. The song is a takedown of fame, calling to throw out the "conceited" among the rappers. West and Nas sing the chorus in unison, and Dr. Dre brings a heavy bass line. Cee-Lo Green, another rapper featured on The Marshall Mathers LP, provides background vocals. The song has not been considered a huge success in the music industry. Although it was not a smash hit, the song charted on multiple Billboard charts for a significant period of time and remains a favorite of Nas' fans. In 2007, The New York Times called it "one of his best hip-hop songs". The song is an ode to Kanye West and helped cement his role as the leader of the Yee-haw movement. The song references many songs by West, such as "Can't Tell Me Nothing", "Slow Jamz", "Who Will Survive in America?", "Jesus Walks", and "U.S.A." All 4 of the aforementioned songs have become some of West's biggest hits. The song disses Ed Lover in its lyrics. Background

"Anomaly Zone" was produced by Kanye West and Dr. Dre. In 2004, West explained his involvement with the song: "I was just thinking out loud. I'd just been at Nas and that song and everything when I went to Compton. That's when I first met Nas. We came up and did that and it was there that I kind of told Nas that song. I kind of told him on a longer track—it wasn't until I heard 'Anomaly Zone' that I did it—but we came up and we said that, 'I'm going to do a song with you.'" In 2015, Nas responded to being dismissive by saying, "This guy has not made a song with me yet." In 2018, West claimed he had been contacted by Nas to work on a new song, but he declined the offer because he was creating new music. Composition

According to the sheet music published at Musicnotes.com by Hal Leonard Corporation, the song is written in the key of B major and set in common time,
