To analyze the influence of in-hospital infections on in-hospital mortality of patients with acute myocardial infarction. Prospective study, involving 1,876 patients admitted to the Coronary Care Unit of the National Institute of Cardiology "Ignacio Chávez", between May 2005 and April 2007. Patients were divided into three groups according to infection process: bacteriemia, urinary tract infection and pneumonia. We determined the proportion of patients with infection by the place of acquisition and type of infection. The presence of infection determined the in-hospital mortality. We studied 1,876 patients, 36.1% (656) were males, with a mean age of 62.98 ± 13.10 years; 57.6% (1,075) were presented risk factors. Of all patients studied, 14.2% (262) had bacteriemia, 17.7% (336) had urinary tract infection and 7.5% (143) had pneumonia. The in-hospital mortality was 11.9% (224) and the 30 days mortality 12.4% (233). The factors associated with in-hospital mortality (by logistic regression) were: age (OR 1.04; 95% CI 1.02-1.07; $p = 0.05$), the time between symptoms onset and hospital admission (OR 1.01; 95% CI 1.01-1.02; $p = 0.01$), multivessel coronary artery disease (OR 1.44; 95% CI 1.05-1.98; $p = 0.03$) and infection (OR 1.51; 95% CI 1.13-1.99; $p = 0.008$). The in-hospital mortality in our series is similar to that reported in other studies. The presence of infection independently increases the in-hospital mortality.Arthur H. Fried Arthur H.
