One of the things Joaquin "Phoenix" Smith remembers most about growing up was the lights being on in the kitchen and living room but not in his bedroom. And it's not like his parents were watching football and never came upstairs-- the problem was the TV was on and Dad was just upstairs playing poker (Don't tell River that-- he'll be really mad!). Still, when they weren't playing video games, Phoenix and River would sometimes invent their own games together to play while sitting on the carpet or on top of the broken lamp. One game they designed (which they will explain here in a future blog post) was called "Zoltar!" The Phoenix family wasn't able to play together on the Nintendo TV for a while after that, but both Joaquin and River had started to spend more time with their mother and older brother, Christopher (age 8). Joaquin also started spending more time with his other brother, David (age 6). Joaquin not only sat down to play the Nintendo with his brother but he and River would give it a shot whenever their mother wasn't home. Joaquin's older and bigger brother, Christopher, would often join in their games. The Phoenix family spent many nights playing games together on the floor of the kitchen. While the Phoenix family spent less time playing video games together, they still hung out regularly to watch cartoons, particularly The Simpsons. Though they only watched two or three episodes of every season, the Phoenix family was almost always watching as it seemed like the family was always in a (comic) fight scene. Joaquin's older and bigger brother, Christopher, would often come in from outside to join them when he could.

the games are saved on disk 1 but the files for phoenix just use disk 2. i used disk 1 for the updated locations. i then saved a backup of the files on disk 1 that are on disk 2 in a folder on disk 1. i then copied the folder with the sids from disk 3 to disk 1 and then renamed the folder and folder containing the extracted sids to the name of the game. i then did the same thing for disk 2 and then when i was finished i deleted the contents of disk 1. so i played a couple of games on the phoenix sid and they all worked great. in one i got to the final battle before the main quest is finished (in the second game, i didn't get that far). i also noticed that when you start the game, the map isn't displayed, but when you select the save point that the map is displayed at. no idea why this is, but it's probably a bug. also, i loaded the map files, but can't find the map_bgs.cfg file. so i guess you can't load the map files, at least not without hacking something up. the sequel to warner bros.'s joker will be written by todd phillips, and stars robert de niro and jessica biel. according to the hollywood reporter, the film is currently in the early stages of production, with phillips actively involved in the writing process. phillips is also the director of the upcoming dark phoenix, which has a february 2019 release date. considering the left-field nature of this particular joker sequel, and the fact that it's not yet been officially announced, we're still not sure exactly what role phoenix's character will have in the movie. the most likely possibility would be that he'll return as the criminal we're forced to call 'the joker'. the most recent joker film, which was released back in october, ended with a scene where phoenix's character is asked if he knows the name 'joker'. he quickly replies that he does not. this would be consistent with the idea that phoenix's arthur is not a true joker, but rather someone who just calls himself that to avoid the police. 5ec8ef588b
