one problem reported by people is that the lock-on and aggressive auto-aim options appear to not be working. again, this could be a retroarch issue, but i don't know enough about them to offer you a solution. you can get a list of retroarch settings by pressing the "r" button on your controller and selecting settings. i hope this helps you resolve your issue. if you use a virtual keyboard for your android phone, you may get a mixup when using this app and the emulator: you type text on your virtual keyboard and the text is mirrored on the screen so you see the type on your phone screen, but the type appears on the emulator screen where you expect to see the emulator's emulator's screen. this can also happen when typing in the emulator's sms texting service because of the interface they use. there's not much we can do about this, but we can make it a little easier to read. if you are running a game that doesn't have built-in support for game genies (it usually appears in the 'unsupported' category), you may want to check the 'recent emulator" section of the settings menu. here you can see a list of what games retroarch supports. since many of these features are tied to the hardware buttons, you'll need to press and hold these buttons to turn the screen on or off. if you miss one, you'll need to press the "back" button on your controller to return to the home screen. although most android devices come with bluetooth enabled, some don't, and others have issues pairing with retroarch. if you've still been having issues, try connecting your phone to a power outlet and try again. 5ec8ef588b
