In 1 BBY, Antilles led Red Squadron in a daring raid on Coruscant, to draw Imperial Star Destroyers away from an attack on a rebel support base on the planet Nar Shaddaa. Skywalker drove a J-type T-65 X-wing in Red Five on the mission, with the former agricultural pilot Darklighter as his wingman. [23] Antilles secretly contacted Windy Porg at Nar Shaddaa, but the pilot was killed in the ensuing conflict. The mission involved the burning of the Imperial Star Destroyer Imperial-I, the second of the two largest Star Destroyers of the Imperial Starfleet. Antilles's squadron was captured by a squad of Imperial TIE interceptors and escorted into a remote landing platform at the base of one of the station's red-matter reactors. Antilles and the others were captured when their Y-wings were forced to land. Then, Antilles and Darklighter were "upgraded" to the orange-hulled TIE interceptors they had seen destroying the Imperial-I. The two Rogues and their escort were marched at gunpoint to the Death Star's control room and the two inmates were set free, presumably after Antilles convinced Vultar to turn over the newly-acquired data tapes. Skywalker and Darklighter returned to Antilles, and together, they flew back to the last picket ship of the squadron, the Mercury. [90] By 1 ABY, the New Republic had been recomposing itself, reassembled under the leadership of the young Corran Horn. [66] As the war intensified, Antilles' squadron participated in several action-packed missions, including a two-pronged rescue of civilian and military personnel from the cities of Kadega and Thyferra, as well as an assault on Imperial-staffed worlds such as Kolch, [23] Soruliss, and less-than-secure [25] Thyferra. Antilles' squadron participated in several major battles of the 1 ABY -6 ABY " war. [66] The wreckage of his X-wing, and the listing of the New Republic's titles of record. [81]

The pilot exchange began on Nasratia. Most of the Rogues flew to the Bilbringi system with an unspecified task, but the others waited at Antilles's orders for the arrivals of the new pilots to begin. The four NRI pilots were Kwinn's old friends Zsinj and Borsk Fey'lya, the Bith Sensoth and his "sister," the Merieadon. The other nine were added to the unit and assigned their initial missions. The Bacta Cartel's representatives were Pash Cracken, a former chief of operations for the Lusankya cartel, and Erisi Dlarit. Jace, Thyferran and Bothan, was a polarizing figure. The Thyferran pilots who flew with him came to respect him, even admire him. The Bothan pilots, already unsure of Antilles's rule, had a distinctly different reaction. Jace attracted the best pilots and was soon a key member of the new Rogues, who increasingly left Antilles to his thoughts, and saw himself as the group's leader. Jace, full of the gregarious attitude of the Pentathians, was a good ambassador for the Rogues in the fleet, especially for the Bothans. Jace, Cracken and Dlarit were largely responsible for the unit's expansion. The Bacta Cartel's representative, Erisi, was in the squadron's pilot exchange room when Jace arrived and, despite her protests, he took her as an executive officer. Dlarit was considered an okay pilot, but could not hold his own with Jace, and was too open and direct to be comfortable in the company of most people. Erisi was far more comfortable with Jace than with Dlarit, and seemed to enjoy the tension between the two. Antilles, seeing the potential for political games from the beginning, was not pleased with Jace's choice.
