the main file on most phones is the db file, which contains a copy of every document in the phone. the db file can grow quite large, even when all of the documents are small. if you repeatedly try to shrink the db file, the file grows. over time, this may become a performance issue and your phone will slow down. if you shrink the db file repeatedly and don't notice it growing again, it may be because you are running out of storage space, even though the phone is still reporting full space. if your phone is running slow, it is not due to a problem with the battery. it may be because you have reached the end of the size of the db file that you can use. to check if your phone has a microsd card, hold down the home key while pressing the sleep/wake button. your phone will vibrate to indicate it has an sd card. note that if your phone has an sd card, this is usually only the third or fourth component of your phone storage. if you want to stay on the clean track and feel safer, take it from here. if you are getting the clean warning, you should remove all browser history, cookies, plug ins, and cache as well as any references to your programs that are lurking around on your computer, whenever you can. the data will automatically be added to the trash and you should empty the trash when you are finished with it. or if you plan to delete the data from the iphone permanently or transfer it to a pc, be sure to do so in the recovery mode or if your iphone has never been unlocked, right now. if you want to stay on the clean track and feel safer, take it from here.
